

JUNE LAKE TRIATHLON JUNE LAKE, CALIFORNIA

2015 Race Date: July 11

"I've had the opportunity to race in lots of different locations since doing my first race in 1985. The best destination race I've done is the June Lake Triathlon held in the Eastern Sierras. We make it a family weekend. The location is spectacular. At 7,500 feet, the swim is in crystal clear June Lake with peaks of the Eastern Sierra as a backdrop. The bike follows the June Lake loop, riding along June Lake, Gull Lake, Silver Lake and Grant Lake. The Olympic-distance and half-IRONMAN runs climb to nearly 8,500 feet. In a race like this, crossing the finish line is always a huge satisfaction. The finish line celebration is always great and there are lots fans to cheer you on. The race is well organized and lots of fun." — Bob Schreiner, 57, Camarillo, California

13

MUST-DO U.S. DESTINATION RACES

Compiled by Cassandra Johnson

From swimming in crystal clear waters to riding through the heart of a bustling city, these 13 travel-worthy destination races will test your endurance, welcome you with gracious community support and fulfill your wanderlust. Selected from the rave reviews of age-groupers around the country, these must-do multisport events will give you that extra motivation you need to jump-start your 2015 training.

